Atlas of the Head Atlas of the Head (also known as The Atlas of Human Dissection) is a three-dimensional anatomical human anatomical atlas prepared by Dr Victor Horsley for the house of science of the Royal College of Surgeons of England. It is also known as the "Burd's Atlas" in memory of William Richard Burd. Preparation In the early part of the 20th century, William Thomas Richard Burd of the British Museum purchased the dissection of Ambroise Paré, chief physician to King Louis XIV. After Burd's death in 1907, his nephew, Lawrence Davidson Burd, sold the collection to the British Museum in 1910. The task of preparing the Atlas was given to Professor Victor Horsley in 1911. The project took five years to complete. Objectives As the first complete atlas of human dissection, the Atlas of the Head lays the foundations for the standardization of the dissection and explains the anatomical structure of the human skull and brain from different views. In this process the dissection of the skulls, which was previously completed by dissecting the bones. Now the skull has become an important base of anatomical science in the field of ba244e880a
