Wacom Bamboo Capture Digital Tablet (CTH470), Silver. Bone marrow mononuclear cell therapy for experimental renal ischemic injury. Bone marrow mononuclear cell therapy (BMC) has demonstrated beneficial effects in the treatment of a variety of diseases, but its effectiveness remains to be further elucidated. The aim of this study was to evaluate the efficacy of BMC therapy in treatment of renal ischemic injury. The study was conducted on 33 adult male Wistar rats. General anesthesia was achieved by an intramuscular injection of sodium pentobarbital (40 mg/kg). After the induction of ischemia of the left kidney, the animals were separated into three groups: bone marrow mononuclear cell therapy, hemodialysis, and the control group. The right kidney was used as the nonischemic control. During the procedure, the left kidney was exposed retroperitoneally, the renal artery and vein were clamped, and then the kidney was ischemic for 35 minutes. Hemodialysis was started immediately after clamps of the left renal artery and vein. Renal ischemia was observed by measuring the left kidney weight at the end of reperfusion. At the end of the operation, the blood samples were taken from the animals to determine the plasma levels of blood urea nitrogen (BUN) and creatinine. Renal histology was evaluated by light microscopy. The left kidney weight increased in the control and the BMC groups. On the contrary, it decreased significantly in hemodialysis group. Plasma BUN and creatinine levels were determined in all the groups. BUN levels were significantly higher in the control group than the other two groups. Creatinine levels were higher in the control and BMC groups than the hemodialysis group. Histopathological evaluation showed that ischemic injury in the kidney tissues decreased in BMC-treated rats. In conclusion, BMC is a promising approach to ischemic kidney injury treatment. The potential use of the 'Folin-Ciocalteu
