Q: How can I make Maven modules depend on each other? I have a few modules in my Maven project that are sharing some code, and I'd like them to depend on each other. Is there a way to do this? I tried adding dependencies inside of each module, but that doesn't seem to work. A: An easy way to make your modules depend on each other is to nest them under a parent pom as children. Then if you want to, it is easy to perform a build from this top level pom to build all your modules. You will need to make sure that your top level pom uses the best practice to build scoped dependencies into the scope pom for the individual modules. The parent pom will look something like the following: 4.0.0 org.example parent 1.0-SNAPSHOT pom api gateway service org.example api ${project.version} org.example gateway ${project.version} org.example service

Because we are in a "waterfront" resort. - Do we need to stay by the beach or are there certain others which you are best suited for. (I have looked but don't know which cat to stay by the beach or inland) Because we are in a "waterfront" resort. - Do we need to stay by the beach or are there certain others which you are best suited for. (I have looked but don't know which cat to stay by the beach or inland) The section of beach closest to the hotel isn't that bad. We are staying by the right/left border of the hotel. There's a fairly big pool at the bottom end of the complex along with an outside jacuzzi and indoor swimming pools. Cat 1 and 2 are best to stay by the beach. Cat 3 is inland. Cat 4 is the opposite side of the main resort. I would recommend staying at the beach if you do plan to get much sun. Cat 1 and 2 are best to stay by the beach. Cat 3 is inland.
